ning of 1970, declined in late Dec. to a yield of 4.7%. Long term government bonds peaked in mid-year at 7.9% and were yielding 6% at the end of 1970.

In the private debt market, prime commercial paper with a 3 to 6 month maturity sold to yield 9.12% in Jan. and 5.75% in Dec. The prime rate of the commercial banking system fell from 8.5% to 6.75% during 1870. However, AAA-rated corporate bonds reached a high of 8.48% in June and declined to only 8% in Dec.

In Jan. 1970 Farmers Bank increased the rate on savings passbooks to 4 1/2%; on 90 day to 1 year Savings certificates to 5%; on 1 year savings certificates to 5 1/2 % and on 2 year savings certificates to 5 3/4%. Loan rates on term loans ranged from 8% to 9% during the year. Interest paid on deposits of $100,000 or more reached a high of 7 1/2% and have declined to 6%.

veling public. "Visitors come to the restored village of Appomattox Court House to sightsee as part of a recreational outing and they come to learn more about their country's history. At Appomattox Americans strengthend their identity with their country."

In 1971 the Park's visits count will be expanded to include persons who visit other historic sites in the Park, but do not go to the Village. We had assumed in the past," Gould said, "that persons who visited Lee's Headquarters, the Confederate Cemetery or Grant's Headquarters also entered the village, but a survey showed that some of our visitors were not going to the village and thus were not being counted. A family, for example, which hikes the trail at Lee's Headquarters and does not go to the village will be counted. Another family which does visit both places will be county only once. Road counters and periodic surveys to determine reduction factors will be used in the visitor count system.

OAKVILLE

Sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Tilden Lee. Our sympathy is extended to the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Martin, Jr. are the proud grandparents of a baby boy, born to Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Martin on January 16th. Congratulations to Jimmy and Micki.

We are glad to say that the sick is better in our community.

We heard that Mrs. Eddie Davidson is sick. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Many of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Marsh's relatives and friends attended the 50th anniversary on Sunday, the 10th at Red Oak Church in the social hall. They received many nice gifts.

Glad to see Herbert Richardson out walking around and going riding. Hope he will soon be driving and back to work.

The Pastor Speaks

Let's Blame the other Fellow

In the field of economics the entire nation is in trouble, and the particular problem is galloping inflation. Who is responsible for it?

If you ask a businessman, he may tell you that it is labor, for he may say their wage demands are too high and their workperformance gets poorer and poorer all the time.

If you ask a worker, however, he may say prices go up because industry has to make an ever bigger profit. Any wage increase we get is soon eaten up by galloping inflation. The greed of industry causes all of this.

In international affairs the Arabs may say that the Israelis are to blame for their problems. The Israelis may retaliate by saying the Arabs have caused it all. Russia blames America for causing it to build up its armament, and America may blame Russia for the same things. What the nations are frequently saying to one another is, "I'm right; you are wrong."

On an individual level a husband may blame his wife for causing him to be a chronic crank. The wife may blame the husband for her nervousness, accusing him of failing to help her with her massive household responsibilities. Everybody simply blames the other fellow.

Jesus has a word of instruction for us in Matthew 7:5, "Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." We can't see the fault in our brother properly because our own faults have blinded us to the faults of others. Our neighbor may have a tiny speck of sin in his life, but our own wrong has made his speck become monumental.

If you want to avoid carping and bitter criticism of one another, and if you want to escape the senseless rumpus ground of blaming other people for your own faults, then you need to take a look at your own needs and admit what they really are. Only as we bow before God and look at our own hearts, see our needs, and seek God's help to remedy those needs will we ever be able to find spiritual victory. Otherwise, individuals, businesses, and nations may destroy themselves by senseless griping.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TWO LOST SONS

Lesson for January 24, 1971

Background Scripture: Luke 15

Some have called the Parable of the Prodigal Son the greatest short story in the world.

Yet, for all this popularity, it is often misunderstood -- or perhaps, not fully understood. Many people seem to miss the fact that Jesus is concerned with two sons, not just one. Both are central to the story: "Jesus said, 'There was a man who had two sons.'"

Son "Came To Himself"

This is the son with whom we are best acquainted. We have known many people like him; perhaps we have even seen a bit of him in ourselves. Despite a loving father and a life that must have been materially quite adequate, he is restless and brazenly asks his father for his share of the estate so that he might leave home.

How typically he represents many young people: he wants to be independent, but he asserts his independence while continuing to live on the resources that come from the one from whom he is separating himself. He leaves home because he obviously wants to be free of all its encumbrances. At last, he will do as he pleases, when he pleases, and how he pleases. No one will dominate him.

Yet, like many of us he comes to find that when we are "free to do as we please," we are not really free but often dominated and in bondage to our own immature impulses and desires. Free of our parents or some other authority, we become slaves to something else. We exchange one kind of bondage for another.

But at last the younger son "comes to himself" -- begins to become his true self. He begins to realize that in being the rebellious, prodigal son, he was not really himself. He had tried out a role that he came to realize was not truly his. Thus, Jesus is telling us that when a man is "away from God," when he sins, he is not his real self, not the self which he can be and was created to be.

At Home -- Wrong Reasons

But there was another son, the eldest son, to be exact. Jewish law indicated that he was to receive two-thirds of his father's estate and his younger brother, one-third. So he remained home with him until his younger brother returns home. Then it becomes obvious that he, too, is estranged, remained with his father, assuming his share of the labors of the family farm.

At first it warms our heart to think that, though the father's heart was broken by his prodigal son, he at least had the faithful love and assistance of another son. But it was obvious that, although the eldest son had done the right thing, he had done it for the wrong reasons. Though he had not rebelled openly, neither did he serve his father for any admirable reason.

It was very apparent that what had seemed to be years of obedience and faithfulness to his father were, in reality, years of grudging service. The labor he performed was apparently, not out of love, but in anticipation of what he would receive in return for it. He was not working for his father, but for himself. His respectable behavior had always, it seems, masked a resentment toward his father.

Son Really "Lost"

Actually, this man is even less attractive than his profligate brother. There is no compassion for his brother: he calls him "your son," not "my brother." He was obviously a self-righteous man, proud of his goodness, certain it should bring him certain rewards.

The father had two sons and one "came to himself" and returned home. But one, though he had never left home, remained "lost." God, it seems, always has more difficulty with this kind of son.

NEW YORK (ap) — More aluminum is being used in the new cars than ever before but if you're a new car owner you're probably noticing it less.

The explanation is that while use of aluminum in auto trim and accessories has declined slightly because of styling changes, it has increased in under-the-hood items, notably transmissions and engines.

Shockless Carpets

Shock-free carpets are made by combining fine nickel or stainless steel fibers with the nap. These fibers are grounded to prevent generation of static electricity by a person walking on the carpet.

Receives Promotion

Raymond Godsey receives promotion at Appomattox Court House National Historical Park from Foreman Ii, WS-6 to Chief of Maintenance WS-8, Mr. Godsey is a native of Appomattox who began working at the park in 1947. He is particularly skilled in the maintenance of historic structures and has suggested and constructed a great many things over the years which have made the historic village more enjoyable for visitors. Superintendent Alec Gould is shown making the presentation to Mr. Godsey.

The Grass Looks Greener At Home

By R. E. McClenny, Jr.
Soil Conservationist
Appomattox County

Grassland is increasing in importance in Appomattox County. The new Conservation Inventory shows that grassland decreased about 3,000 acres and pasture gained most of the cropland loss. This trend is expected to continue. Soils in Appomattox County are well suited to growing improved grasses and legumes.

The main reason for more and more is more beef cattle and more dairy farming. Beef cow economics favor more grazing and less feeding. Several farmers in the community were invited to Nottoway County to tour a one-year grazing operation. During the tour were John Allen, James Bennett, Hugh Bracey, Hunter Evans, John Noteboom, Bob McClenny and Jim Smith. The tour was conducted by Thad Trew, Grassland Conservationist, SCS, on the farm of W. T. Barnes near Blackstone.

Barnes grazes 125 cows on 300 acres. He has 212 acres of fescue, 40 acres of Orchardgrass and 84 acres of common bermuda grass. About 120 acres of the fescue is managed for winter and early summer grazing. The remainder of the fescue is used in the spring and fall. The orchardgrass is cut in the spring for hay and grazed in the fall. Bermudagrass (wiregrass) furnishes summer grazing.

Barnes is a believer in soil testing. Phosphate and potash is adapted to all pastures as the tests shows it is needed. Cows are moved from pastures being used for winter grazing around August and 70 to 80 lbs. of actual nitrogen is applied. These winter pastures are not grazed until December. Under favorable conditions one acre should carry a cow through the winter.

Spring and fall grazed pastures get about 50 lbs. of actual nitrogen in August. Orchardgrass gets about 80 lbs of extra nitrogen in early spring to insure a good cutting of hay. The bermudagrass gets about 40 lbs. of nitrogen late in April.

Cattle are grazed on a rotational system allowing the pasture to make regrowth before being grazed down again.

Barnes manages the 336 acre farm and 125 head of brood cows and has a part time job.

Upon returning from Nottoway John Alvis took the group to his farm to see his winter pastures. Everyone agreed that John's fescue looked better than any they'd seen down the road.

Center Has New Staff Member

An audiologist from Pennsylvania, Kathleen A. Plocki, has been named the second staff member of the Central Virginia Speech and Hearing Center.

The appointment was announced by L. H. McCue, chairman of the center's personnel committee which screened some 20 audiologists before selecting Miss Plocki.

She will join David L. Jaffee, executive director of the center as the nucleus of a clinical group which will offer a full range of diagnostic and theraputic services to children and adults who have impairments of speech or audition and reside in Lynchburg, Bedford or the counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford and Campbell.

Miss Plocki is a magna cum laude graduate of Clarion State College, Clarion, Pa., where she received two bachelors degrees one in speech pathology and another in audiology.

W & M Freshman Visit Here

Earle MacKenzie, of Norfolk and Tommy Terry, of Appomattox (both freshmen at the College of William and Mary) toured the Times-Virginian on Monday and were interested in the operation of the large camera in the print shop which photographs each page of the newspaper prior to running it off on an offset press. Another college friend, James Shearl, was also here for a break between semesters. This was the visitors' first opportunity to tour the National Park here and other places of interest.

Soybean Price-Support $2.25 Bu.

Price-support loan level for 1970-crop soybeans will be at a national average of $2.25 per bushel, No. 1 grade, 12.8 - 13.0 percent moisture, it was announced today by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This level is unchanged from that in effect for the 1970 crop.

As in prior years, producers can receive loans on their 1971-crop soybeans stored on farms or in warehouses, or can sell them to Commodity Credit Corporation.

Price-support loan and purchases transactions will be handled by county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices.

Other details concerning the 1971 soybean program will be announced later.
